Destination Information:

Anaheim, the 10th largest city in California, is synonymous with Disneyland, which opened in 1955 on the site of a former orange grove and changed the city's profile forever. Disney's Magic Kingdom soon became the most-visited place in all of North America.

It is continually expanding and updating its facilities. Disney's California Adventure debuted a US$1 billion renovation and expansion project at the beginning of summer 2012. Together, the two Disney parks draw nearly 50 million visitors a year.

Still, there are plenty of other reasons to visit Anaheim. The city has completed a US$5 billion investment anchoring Anaheim to Downtown Disney and The Shops at Anaheim Garden Walk shopping, dining and entertainment districts, as well as the Anaheim Convention Center. Despite the economic downturn in California, investment in Anaheim has continued at a brisk pace.

Anaheim's theme park history predates Disneyland, however. In 1934, Cornelia Knott established a fried-chicken restaurant on her husband's berry farm. Her boysenberry pies and jellies were a smash hit, and customers often waited in line. To keep them amused, Walter Knott built a Wild West Ghost Town. Additional themed attractions soon resulted in California's first theme park, known as Knott's Berry Farm

Sports fans will also find favor in this city that is home to two notable professional sports teams: the MLB Los Angeles Angels of Anaheim; and perhaps the quirkiest team in the NHL, the Anaheim Ducks.
